

LangChain is a framework for developing applications powered by language models.

It provides components for prompts, document processing, retrievers, vector stores, chains, and agents.

LangChain can connect language models with external data sources and tools.

It is commonly used to build question-answering systems, RAG applications, conversational applications, and AI agents.